Overview

Ladakh is a trans-Himalayan landlocked between different mountain ranges of Karakoram, Ladakh, Zaskar and Himalayas. This region offers a picturesque beauty of various landscapes since it is a cold desert surrounded by colourful mountains. The beauty isn't limited to its physical attributes but its culture and tradition of its people further augments the mystique of this land. The population living in this region belongs to Mongolian and Dardic race whose culture and tradition have developed over the period of its history. And the very core of its history could only be witnessed and understood by visiting the different monasteries situated in and around Leh since most of these infrastructures were once the palaces of its rulers such as Shey monastery, Namgyal monastery etc. Other than the monastery, you can also pay a visit to the utmost famous site of Leh, "The Leh Palace".

To the east of Leh lies the Changthang region; a land of vast spread wetlands and landlocked blue lakes. And one of the most known such lakes is the Pangong lake; it gained popularity post shooting of a famous bollywood film named, "3 Idiots". People in the Changthang region still resort to their nomadic practices such as living in traditional tents and herding their cattle around according to the seasons.
